Need an Article? Let the Library Get it for You!

Have you ever happened upon an article you want to read—whether through Google, PubMed, or the journal's website—and tried to download it, only to be prompted to pay money for access? If this happens, send the article's citation information to the library and our staff will put in an order for the full text. We work with other libraries to fill requests and get you the literature you need at no cost to you. Once we receive the article, library staff will email you a PDF copy; it's that simple!

Ways to request:

1. Email the citation information to the library directly at library@rochesterregional.org
2. Use the "Request a copy of a specific article" button on the library's website
3. Fill out the form that generates when you click on the "Find Article @ RRH" button:
